MEN have at times made much of the value of religion as inducing content. But in fact one of the greatest of its services to man is to induce discontent. Men God-driven are men unsatisfied. The hope of the future lies in the rebellion of men against circumstances, their splendid unwillingness to leave things as they are.

—Jesse H. Holmes

The Practice of the Absence of God

..... by Howard W. Alexander

Visitors from the Barriada

..... by Margery S. Walker

Meditation on Soil

..... by Francis D. Hole

Publish or Perish?

..... by Dorothy M. Williams

Southern California Half-Yearly Meeting

Friends' Attitudes Toward Poverty
Thoughts from Turtle Bay

QUAKER UNITED NATIONS PROGRAM

Happy Birthday to U (N)

On the first day of the United Nations' twentieth anniversary observance in San Francisco, two of the Quaker United Nations Program staff were on their way to the West Coast, one for the Friends Conference on World Order that was to follow, the other on a tour to talk about the U.N. at American Friends Service Committee summer camps and institutes. Another was in Geneva to help with coverage of Economic and Social Council meetings. The one left in New York stayed on his way to the office to ask the Carnegie Building manager if he was going to set up the TV as usual in the lounge so that one could hear the President's speech. "What President? What speech? Where?" the man asked. "Oh! Sure, why not?"

For lunch, our Friend joined about sixty-five other invited guests in the U.N. delegates' dining room to honor the Minister of Education of Kenya at a very friendly, warm and well-attended celebration welcoming the spirit of the new free and interracial world of international cooperation that is the U.N.'s aspiration. This was heartening, but our Friend's mind was also in San Francisco, and he had chosen his seat at table with the sole consideration that it be near a side door so that he could get to that screen by 2:30. As he left the U.N. building, he found himself hurrying across the street with a member of the U.S. Mission who said: "What a chance he has to say something big! Why, he could really turn the whole tide."

The machine was set up, as promised, with comfortable seats in two facing rows. No one else was there; no one else came. Our man, full of expectation, turned on the channel just as the President was announced. The speech, while suited to its occasion, had right generalities of praise and respect for the U.N., offered no mention of any solution to the U.N.'s number-one problem, the General Assembly's stalemate. While pledging support to U.N. peacekeeping efforts, it in effect asked the U.N. to support U.S. policy in Vietnam.

As the camera panned at various ambassadors' familiar faces, it seemed to our Friend that he could read their thoughts more easily than he could apologize for the synthetic White House-Pentagon-State-Department line that the President was reading as if it were the lesson for the day—rebuttal acceptance in some, cynical indifference in others, pained heart-searching in the friendly-disposed, reconfirmed opposition in the hostile, considerable incredulity in the most responsible. It was finished. What had happened to the heroic moment?

And why had Mr. Johnson spoken from his own special lectern, behind his own seal, above and to one side, instead of down where members belong? Was this a question of protocol? Whose? Or was it symbolic, consciously or unconsciously?

Other heads of state have spoken from the regular rostrum, below the high desk of the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General, under the U.N. emblem. Why not the President of the United States of America? Perhaps even the same words would have had a truer ring down there.
Peddlers of Death

HOW can we recognize consensus when we meet it? For those of us in our little world of Quakerism and nonviolence who for months have been hearing one outraged protest after another against our country’s lapse into jingoistic militarism, it comes as an almost incredible shock to discover that, by dominant standards, it is those of our ilk, not the militarists, who are viewed as trouble-makers.

Thus we find the majority of newspapers in the United States (in other countries it is a very different story) heaping scorn on the “beatniks,” “milksops,” and similar low characters who oppose U.S. involvement and methods in Vietnam and the Dominican Republic. When thousands of students, teachers, ministers, and other concerned citizens stage marches on Washington or express dissenting views on their government’s intervention policies, most newspapers give them little or no space unless some incident occurs that can be played up in an unfavorable light. From what you read in the papers you might assume (if you did not know better) that ninety-nine percent of Americans favored the bombing of North Vietnam and the cracking of Uncle Sam’s big stick over the West Indies, and that those who oppose these ventures are merely an insignificant fringe of unpatriotic nuisances.

Yet it may be that the advocates of the big-stick doctrine are more characteristic of majority American opinion than we seem possible to those of us who look on in horror as the values we have deemed important are crushed one by one by the military juggernaut. Representative of this is the recent report of the Harris Survey (one of the innumerable surveys that thrive so buoyantly in this day of taking each other’s pulses), which shows more than half of those interviewed declaring that protests against U.S. policy in Vietnam are a very bad thing—probably a manifestation of an organized “radical” plot to undermine the country.

All of this has an ominous tone to those of us old enough to remember the McCarthy era and the popular scorn of pacifists in past wartimes. It is even more ominous to anyone who has read the publisher’s announce-tion. Perhaps by examining our flag—the symbol of our relationship with all men—and what we are doing with it, we might correct some of the causes of our current unpopularity.

"The American flag . . . is the visual representation of our heritage of honor and mercy, freedom and courage. As such, it should be possible for all of us to feel the deep stir of patriotism while saluting it, without being considered drooling sentimentalisists.

"But where have we carried this flag . . . ? We carried it to Hiroshima, to our everlasting shame. We carried it in misguided ignominy to the Bay of Pigs. We are frantically waving it as we whistle in the dark of South Vietnam and Santo Domingo.

"Why? In too many instances what started out as military strategy . . . has deteriorated into a face-saving operation. Why this Oriental concept should be so much with us while our own avowal of 'In God we trust' is reserved for formal engravings on coins is a mystery.

"Let's examine the 'face' we are saving.

"It is the face which screams 'Ioul' at every Russian move to do the very things we are and have been doing since the outset of the cold war—ignoring boundaries with reconnaissance flights, establishing rings of air bases, infiltrating agents into the social structure. These acts are all excused by us, and for us, but for no other country not aligned with us, as being 'defensive,' even though it is fairly obvious that our only defense, our only hope, lies in the realm of the spirit, rather than that of military force.

"It is the face which has displayed the utmost contempt for nations which break treaties, while it has unblushingly broken treaty after treaty with its own people, the American Indians. These contractual side-stoppings are brilliantly labeled 'progress'—unneeded and unwanted dams and roads, as with the Senecas, inadequately recompensed removal from the land which had been theirs for centuries, as with the Plains Indians, limitation to reservations and the undermining of their morale . . .

"Is the face worth saving? Or is it possible that we have reached the point where a return to the simple virtues of guilelessness and honor are not only desirable: they are essential to the survival of both the flag and the nation for which it is the symbol? The 'face' will then take care of itself."

The Practice of the Absence of God

By HOWARD W. ALEXANDER

The world's experience of professèd sees has on the whole been very unfortunate. In the main, they are a shady lot with a bad reputation. Even if we put aside those with some tinge of insincerity, there still remain the presumptuous, ignorant, incompetent, unbalanced band of false prophets who deceive the people. On the whole, the odds are so heavily against any particular prophet that, apart from some method of testing, perhaps it is safer to stone them, in some merciful way.

-A. N. WHITEHEAD, The Function of Reason

PROFESSOR Whitehead here suggests a method of procedure in dealing with prophets who claim to be obedient to the Word of the Lord. But how shall we deal, or how indeed shall the Lord deal, with a disobedient prophet? The book of Jonah presents to us the strange spectacle of a prophet who, instead of "practicing the presence of God" and following where he leads, is determined to do the opposite—to "practice the absence of God."

Who was Jonah? The superscription identifies him as "Jonah the son of Amittai." (mentioned in 2 Kings 14:25). But historical research will throw little light on the book of Jonah. More to the point is the remark of James D. Smart in the Interpreter's Bible that the name Jonah means dove; and the dove is a symbol of Israel. This is the essential clue to the book of Jonah, for it is surely a parable of Israel: of its ineffectual flight from God, its disobedience to his leading, and the calamities that ensue from this. It is also a parable of the exclusivist mentality that afflicted Israel in the fourth century B.C., stemming from the reforms of Nehemiah and Ezra.

The last thing in the world that Jonah wants to do is to preach repentance to Nineveh. He foresees correctly that the Ninevites may repent and turn to the Lord, and that would be the greatest calamity of all! For a Jew of Jonah's persuasion it was impossible to conceive that Yahweh could be the God of all the nations and that all men were enfolded in his mercy.

So Jonah's problem becomes: how to escape from the Lord? If Yahweh is actually a local, tribal god, then one can escape from him simply by going far enough away—outside his territory, so to speak. Hence when Jonah is called to preach to Nineveh, "that great city," the fabled capital of Assyria, he goes down to Joppa and finds a ship sailing to the farthest possible port in the opposite direction, "away from the presence of the Lord."

But God is the Inescapable One, and Jonah probably

Howard Alexander, chairman of the department of mathematics at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, is beginning in September two years of service at University College, Nairobi, which is part of the University of East Africa. This article is an offshoot of a term of study he recently completed at Earlham School of Religion.
July 15, 1965

FRIENDS JOURNAL

knows this. In his heart he knows that the Lord will seek him out, no matter where he goes: "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? Or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" (Ps. 139:7) The sea is no place to flee from Him, for it is His; He made it, and all the creatures in it, large and small. So there comes a storm, which is an instrument of God for Jonah's redemption. The sailors are also instruments of God's redemptive purpose, even though they are merely Phoenicians (i.e. Canaanites) and are ignorant of Yahweh.

The captain finds Jonah fast asleep in "the inner part of the ship" and urges him to join all the crew in prayers to whatever gods they worship, in case there should be some successful prayer among them all. The bowels of the ship and a sleep so deep the storm cannot disturb it are all part of Jonah's headlong flight—back to infancy, back to the womb, back to complete irresponsibility.

Lots are then cast to determine whose the blame is, and Jonah is found out! He has nothing to live for, so he tells the men to throw him into the sea, that they may be delivered from the deadly peril that he represents to them. These Phoenician sailors are good men and desire no harm to Jonah, so first they try to save the ship by rowing. It is no use; the storm rages more fiercely than ever; and finally they toss Jonah overboard, not without a prayer to his God for forgiveness. In the calm that follows, the sailors, good men that they are, fear the Lord, offer a sacrifice to him, and make appropriate vows. So Jonah's self-giving has brought them salvation. How that would have distressed him, had he known it!

The sea, though stormy, actually has been obedient to the purpose of God; likewise the Phoenician sailors have been obedient. And now a great fish, in obedience to the Lord, swallows Jonah for three days and three nights and then vomits him out upon the dry land. All those things which seem most to threaten Jonah—the alien sailors, the destructive tempest, the great deep itself, and finally the great fish—all these are instruments of mercy, instruments of a loving God who draws Jonah back to Himself. But there is only one way for Jonah to be reconciled to the Lord; there is only a narrow pathway back which leads through that great and terrible city of Nineveh.

Let us look for a moment at the psalm which Jonah is represented as composing while in the belly of the fish. Its message is echoed in many of the Psalms: at the very time when I was overwhelmed by life itself, "thy waves and thy billows," at this very time "thou didst hear my voice . . . thou didst bring up my life from the Pit, O Lord my God." Some seem never to learn from suffering they endure; but some are brought by suffering to that state of mind described by Robert Barclay in which "the witness of God ariseth in the heart, and the light of Christ shineth, whereby the soul cometh to see its own condition" (Apology, p. 338). The belly of a fish must be a dark, damp and slimy place; yet some discover God in such places.

Jonah finds his task easier, perhaps, than he expected. The simple proclamation, in the center of Nineveh, "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown!" brings the Ninevites to true repentance. They proclaim a fast and put on sackcloth; the king covers himself with sackcloth and sits in ashes; and he orders man and beast to be covered with sackcloth and to take neither food nor water. When God sees this He is impressed: so many men and so many cattle, all in a state of true repentance! The cup of wrath which God is ready to pour over the city of Nineveh is put aside.

Never before has such a great repentance been known. Jonah as a prophet is overwhelmingly successful. But he is disgusted. The worst thing in the world—just what he has feared—has happened. The Ninevites have repented. Jonah wants no part of a world in which the Lord abounds in steadfast love—to Ninevites! It was to escape precisely such a world that he had fled to Tarshish; it was because he had suspected that the Lord's steadfast love extended even to the ship at sea in the midst of the storm, with its heathen sailors, that he had been so willing to be thrown overboard. So he prays, "Now, O Lord, take my life from me, I beseech thee, for it is better for me to die than to live." A quiet voice within him keeps saying, "Are you sure about this anger of yours? Does it make any sense?" But Jonah is in no mood to listen to quiet voices. He is still hopeful that doom will come, and so he prepares himself a ringside seat in a little booth on a hill to the east of the city and waits for the holocaust.

There he sits in the burning sun, suffering from (and at the same time nursing) his righteous anger at the Lord. So God appoints a castor-bean plant (just as He had appointed the great fish) to come up in a night and give him shade, for which Jonah is grateful. The next night God appoints a worm to destroy Jonah's bit of shade; and He appoints a sultry east wind to make Jonah even more uncomfortable. Jonah feels more ridiculous than ever, more alienated from the world God has created. What sense or meaning is there in a world in which, as soon as a fellow gets a bit of shade, it is taken from him? That little plant, so quickly grown, so quickly destroyed, was the only thing in the world to which Jonah's heart could go out in tenderness and compassion. God says to him, "If you can exercise compassion on so transient a thing as a simple plant, why should my pity not extend to all the inhabitants of the great city of Nineveh, to all
Meditation on Soil
By Francis D. Hole

Many Friends throughout the history of our Society have been by necessity close to the soil, all the while their main business was to draw close to the Inner Light. Their central experience in worship has been to find an interior source of new orientation and energy that fortunately is not limited by local cultural controls. This experience is not unrelated to the outward landscape. We can presume that rural Friends have sensed in the soil around their meeting houses and dwellings an inexhaustible potentiality—a promise for renewal of life for centuries to come.

We are interested in soil in considerable part because it so successfully resists intellectual analysis and scientific investigation. Some enthusiasm for “organic gardening” comes from our conviction that the complexities of the biologic-soil cycle still elude scientists and hence, in some special sense, still belong to all of us.

A helpful exercise in this connection is to compare a purely appreciative approach to soil with a somewhat analytical one. This can be attempted in the following two verses. The first is patterned after the Japanese haiku or seventeen-syllable poem:

From hill’s slope
I see soil glint red at the crest
And shine black at the foot!

The response captured in this haiku is contemplative, or “eastern.” The next verse is “western,” or scientific, in that it records the eagerness of another viewer of the same landscape to delve into the soil and to treat it as an object of investigation:

Soil on the hilltop and in the valley,
I dig deep and lift you out of the cool darkness
And hold you here, blocks and crumbs of soil in my handclasp,
Moist earth or hard—but if I could somehow grasp
Why you were born red on the crest and black in the lowland,
How you distribute the rainwater, nourish crop and forest stand
And the city man’s Ailanthus tree in the alley,
Then I could comprehend people and the universe.

In the course of thousands of years our soils have been receptive to a great variety of plants and animals. While supplying nutrients and water to these living things, the soils to a depth of several feet have become altered and colored by them and by the elements to brighter hues at the hillcrest and grays in the depression.

Francis D. Hole, Clerk of Madison (Wis.) Meeting, is chairman of the Advancement Committee of Friends General Conference and professor of soil science in charge of the Soil Survey Division at the University of Wisconsin.

Early American Friends shared in the clearing of the forests and the job of growing one blade of corn where a wild tree seedling grew before. The program of growing two blades of better corn or rice where one of ordinary quality grew before is not yet perfected, as far as the hungry of the world are concerned. Nor has the highest goal been achieved of sustaining one fully loved and loving human spirit in the space once occupied by, let us say, a score of trees.

Most of us live in an urban society and make our way to meeting along streets. We are necessarily conscious of the works of man. It little matters to us that the rises and dips in the land, now carpeted with lawns, structures, and asphalt, once displayed a natural mosaic of soils in a state of dynamic rapport with forests, prairies, and marshes. Except in those places where structures have been improperly set on land too wet or otherwise unstable, the soils have received us as hospitably as they received plant and animal populations before us.

The soil outlasts each of us and stands ready to support whatever form of life comes next. There is a patience and ultimate renewability about soil which answers that of God in us. Words bewilder us; soils renew us.

In fair weather some of us worship out of doors. In our meditations there are we conscious of the soil that undergirds us and other life around us? Are we able to see our meeting houses now and in the expanding future as major centers for crop improvement—that is, for improvement of the most important crop which the soils of this planet have yet supported: human beings with exercised, liberated, and productive spirits?

Visitors from the Barriada

By MARGERY S. WALKER

The morning of the visit found me busy with the usual clearing of decks for company, but with more inner butterflies than if the President himself had been coming for tea. In fact, I would have felt more comfortable with that protocol than with the thought of the fifteen children I had invited from one of Lima's barriadas (slum districts).

How would they feel as they set foot in a real house—the first time for most of them? In their community of 10,000, the smallest of three adjacent “barriadas,” there is no indoor water or drain, no plumbing except an open acequia (ditch) which drains off the refuse from a nearby factory and to which they add the contents of their night pots. The houses are of cardboard, adobe, scrap wood, and metal; they are windowless, with dirt floors. Cooking is done on a single primus, often on the floor. No trees or greenery brighten the grayness. A few streets bisect the area, but the majority of residents live off narrow callejones—little alley walkways, barely wide enough for one person, which wind through the agglomeration of crowded shacks.

Our house, in a middle-class neighborhood, is large, airy, and comfortable. Would they resent the confrontation with such enormous discrepancy? Would it spoil their appreciation of their own homes? Would it ignite social revolution? Eying our full wardrobes, laden bookshelves, and well-stocked larder, I shrank with guilt. How would these appear to my pals, with their one or two dirty frocks or shirts, a tattered comic, and the frugal supplies for each meal carefully purchased and put directly into the pot?

But I was concerned not only for the children. How would the neighbors view the occasion? Would they fear that I was opening the floodgates to let such a crew of unkempt young 'uns make themselves at home on our street? Would it spoil the growing cordiality and acceptance we enjoyed? Further, was I endangering our own family's health? How would the children react? Would they want to examine and test the many new things? Would they know how to use the bathroom?

With these teeming uncertainties, I think I should have abandoned the project several times over if it had not been strongly supported not only by Peruvian friends whom I consulted, but also by a sense of leading during our Friends' meeting for worship.

During that meeting for worship it had come to me keenly that the basic core of all human life—perhaps of all life—is vibrant interpersonal contact. Love must be mediated by individuals. It seems a miracle that these barriada children, lacking practically every ingredient we deem important for the growth in wisdom and stature of our own little ones, and subjected to every influence we judge destructive, should yet emerge so indistinguishable in their basic responses from all children everywhere.

I have known most of the children for almost two years through weekly visits to the barriada and (during the summers) through excursions to the beach. The relationship has provided me with endless stimulation and... pleasure. They have taught me language, customs, and folklore; have left me in awe with their merriment, resilience, and eagerness despite the stench, dirt, overcrowding, hunger, and premature responsibilities of their environment; have made me despair with their grabbiness, short attention span, unfulfilled commitments, and seeking of special privilege; have made me turn over inside with tenderness by their gestures of comforting and sharing with unimaginably dirty, nondescript, half-naked little sibling waifs who seem raised up out of the very dust.

So these were my friends to whom I wanted to open up my home. They often had asked “Where do you live?” or had said “Let’s go to your house!” The visit seemed a logical extension of the “horizon-expansion” banner under which I tend to classify my efforts. Most of the women and children never go beyond the confines of the barriada except to cross the street to market or to school. The children have been full of questions about life elsewhere. Here might be a step in their outreach of understanding.

During the past months I had come to know each of my young guests as an individual. There is Alejandro, a lively, slight lad of nine with sharp features and hooded eyes, who, for some undiscernible reason, is a leader. He is quick, rather than warm, and sharp, not wise, but he frequently engages other boys in imaginative projects beyond their ken.

Lola, another go-getter, is twelve, but one would guess at least fifteen—not an uncommon phenomenon among these children who know so much at the dawn of their being. Her family proliferates in several generations around the barriada. She is tough and volatile.

Graciela is a slim, well-matured sixteen-year-old who wears her scanty clothing with conscious allure. She is not in school now and is vague about her plans. Her parents run a little food shop in the barriada. She washes, cooks, and minds the little ones; she also loves to dance and to charm the boys.

And there is Jose, a cheery, square-faced ten-year-old who is the third of seven children. I had tabbed him as more gentle and responsive than some until the day he turned up as a stowaway on an excursion to the beach. He and his older brothers and sister are cleaner and more neatly dressed than the others, though even in this family it seems to be a hopeless job to attend to the hygiene of the little ones. They go to school and appear to be doing well. If anyone can make it out of the environment it will be their kind.

They came that afternoon, fifteen of the sixty or so children in the group; the others would be invited later if all went well this time. A few were scrubbed up for the occasion, but most were in their normal state of grime (so much more obvious outside the barriada). They poured out of the car and filed cautiously into the house. After a moment of strained conversation as they perched tentatively on the living-room chairs, they accepted with relieved acracy an invitation to tour the house. Comments were few, with the recurring themes of “How big!” “Just your family live here?” “No television?” Some of their barriada neighbors do have T.V.’s, and in the dark closeness of one of those cramped houses one may come upon from ten to twenty children and a sprinkling of adults watching the program—any program—at fifty centavos (two cents) a half day. which we are trying to encourage them to incorporate in their diets). It was a pleasure to see them relaxed about taking their turn at first, though at the end there was a bit of a scramble for the last crumbs.

The mechanics of distribution is always a difficult job with these youngsters, so used to competing for scarce resources. One starts out with prim and righteous notions of fair play, lining up for turns, proper qualifications, etc., but such orderly views of life are severely tempered by their wheelings, their illogical and often barefaced lies, their callous determination to get what they can, whether they want it or not! The sight of something “to get” seems to trigger an almost irreversible pattern of pack behavior, though if, in the midst of the furor, one catches the eye of a child with whom one has talked, the response is likely to be a rueful smile and a sheepish withdrawal from the crowd—for a moment, anyway.

To establish in our group the trust and confidence needed to minimize this reflex pattern in which they have been schooled has been a long road. Other paseos (outings) have helped greatly in getting a few children at a time into a context of happy, friendly relationships and plentiful resources. The poise they learn in waiting for their due recognition in a group can serve them well, both toward realization of their own dignity and also as a step toward becoming more competent citizens in the quest for social justice tomorrow.

Take fourteen-year-old Ismael, for instance—tall, stooped, and dressed in a khaki school uniform. His mother had warned me that he should not eat fats because of a “bad liver”—a common complaint here. He tried several subterfuges around the tea table and almost won capitulation with his wistful pleading, but on having the matter put squarely to his own intelligence he rose to the test with such heroic self-restraint that I felt a throb of joy at his maturity.

Refreshments over, the girls had the table cleaned off and were washing the dishes before I knew it. What fun they had with plenty of soap and hot running water! I left them to go help the boys with more skates and trikes, and when I came back I found them polishing everything a second time from sheer enchantment with the facilities.

A few records, a visit to the nearby park with lots of playground equipment, round-eyed stares for our own children as they arrived home from school in their uniforms of suits and ties—and it was time to take our guests home—home to the smells of thousands living without plumbing, to the clutter of overcrowding and ignorance, to the stopped-up drain of the caíña (community water tap), with its sea of mud and stagnant water to wade through every time you need a drop of that vital liquid. But home to families and the familiar. It had been a stretching, tiring day for us all.

I am wonderfully curious to see what the children will say when I see them next. Will they have any comments or questions? Will they have told their friends? For our part, we already have been called down by our landlord and neighbor. “Not that we minded their ringing our bell, you know, but they really don’t belong here. Health hazard, you know—” with a lengthy description of a friend of theirs who worked in a barriada and got T. B. “The neighbors might get the wrong impression—Of course, it’s your house—”

Lord, make us an instrument of thy peace!

Publish or Perish?
By Dorothy M. Williams

For some time the phrase “publish or perish” has been current in university circles. It began in science departments where research was the focus for all new knowledge and where results could be published in a minimum of space in periodicals existing solely for that purpose. Today it has become standard university policy in all departments; in fact, applications for graduate school query the neophyte on what he has published. “Publish or perish” now conditions the waking hours of all university teachers, for time must be wrung from the crowded daily routine for “productive scholarship.” This time-squeeze limits human relations, puts a premium on time spent with students beyond brief classroom contacts, and concentrates the attention of the teacher on the practical means for his own professional survival.

Although the new instructor may already have won his Ph.D., he must insure postdoctoral publication of a book every three years and of scholarly articles in the interim. Without this he cannot look forward to salary increases, promotion, or assured tenure. In fact, he is likely to lose his job.

The argument for publications as a prerequisite for teaching and a measurement of teaching ability begins with the premise that the university is dependent for its academic standing on published research and that the number of volumes written by its faculty determines its standing in a competitive scholastic world. The higher it ranks in this respect (according to this line of thought), the more intelligent the students the institution can attract, the more research grants it receives, and the greater prestige its graduates enjoy. Above all, the thesis runs, the most able professor is the one who can both teach and write.

Dorothy M. Williams, recording clerk of Easton (N. Y.) Monthly Meeting, is a former college teacher of English whose present chief connections with the academic world are through her four children. She is now working in the field of art history for the Hyde Collection of Glen Falls, N. Y.
To judge the validity of such an argument it is necessary to scrutinize the practical results. Not only does the “publish or perish” policy eliminate from the university faculty all new teachers who find their vocation in the act of teaching itself and who have not the talent for writing, but it is destructive of this very act of teaching. It slants the emphasis from the responsibility of teacher for student to his production of written words which are designed not for the classroom but for a wider scholastic audience. Division of interest is not conducive to top performance. The committee which evaluates the teacher’s success in his job has a procrustean publication yardstick to determine his worth to the institution. The teacher is well aware that this committee is likely to give more weight to what he has published than to the number of students whose emotional growth he has nurtured or who have been challenged by his courses to learn the discipline of thinking for themselves.

Another result of the focus of simultaneous publishing and teaching is its effect on the individual who does succeed in functioning within its time-squeeze. He becomes “the young man in a hurry,” limited in all his relationships by his dual objectives. There is little time for normal relaxation or even for a peripheral view of other fields than his own to bring him a wider perspective. He is forced to be slanted toward library stacks and the past they represent; he is narrowed in his interests, a closed personality, “an egghead” who is often unable to cope with problems in his own practical present.

So now we have a “name” professor with a list of titles to prove his competence. Does the student gain? Because the professor can now command it by his name, his teaching load in laboratories, discussion sessions, and paper grading is shifted to the shoulders of graduate students who may or may not know anything about teaching; he sees his students only at lectures, finding it difficult to connect names and faces and feeling little responsibility for their failures, since their grades have been compounded from the judgments of others. His gaze is oriented to a wider professional world than his own campus, where he is often involved in multi-university organizations. Students may speak of him with respect, but he is not likely to be a beloved mentor.

A side result of the “publish or perish” policy is the hindrance it presents to true scholarship, in place of which we find an army of coerced researchers cluttering up the publication lists with potboilers and adding to a wasteland of academic jargonese aimed at deadlines.

The function of the university is becoming that of a degree-granting institution, with its diploma a kind of union card for all employment. Somewhere along the line we have lost the halls of learning where emotional maturity was a wayside flower, where the teacher was oriented to develop the student’s mind and, often as a by-product, sow seeds of character growth. Instead, collegiate experience offers the student competition as a value and ideas in an ethical vacuum. Material success too often becomes the hay in front of the donkey’s nose.

The hope of parents naively has been to insure a better world for their children; it has been presumed that more education would automatically underwrite that world. Perhaps it is pertinent to inquire what kind of education: education of computers by computers for computers? Are we interested in securing survival for men or for machines?

If we are more concerned with youth, there is real need now to redress the balance between publications and teaching. We need to remember that the love of learning will not flower unless the seed is planted. We need to honor teaching itself as a full-time occupation and to subsidize it. We need to evaluate the success of the teacher by the kind of student he turns out as the end product of the university system.

International Quaker Center in Paris

This translation (abridged) of an account of the International Quaker Center at 114 rue de Vaugirard, Paris, appeared in the April “Lettre Fraternelle,” French Friends’ periodical.

The authors are the Center’s directors. It is published here because of its possible interest to American travelers in Europe.

We receive many visions, and their number will increase with nice weather. This makes our work more and more interesting but does not simplify it. A problem that comes up more persistently than one might suppose is how to make the Center a place where people of all races, nationalities, and faiths (all equally welcome) can gather without attracting all the beggars of the neighborhood and every sort of malcontent from the other shores of the Atlantic: for these we have neither the money nor (it must be admitted) the psychological equipment their need requires.

A great variety of associations and groups meet here regularly for lectures and studies or for the practice of their exercises—physical, philosophic, psychological, or artistic. But most of these groups are fairly homogeneous, already well integrated, certainly aware of their aims: they pose no problem for us. There are also other groups having more limited aims—for instance, that made up of diplomats who find the Center one of the rare spots favorable to free discussion.

But few of the individuals and other small groups who come under our roof have fixed objectives or plans; rather, they seek here something to sustain or even to guide them in their spiritual, intellectual, or cultural quests. They have our understanding, for we too find worthwhile the lectures and gatherings outside the Center that we attend from time to time. We feel that we all need all the inspiration and moral aid that we can find so that the work of the Center may develop in a truly international sense in a genuinely Quaker atmosphere.

M. C. and Elizabeth Morris
Southern California Half-Yearly Meeting

SOUTHERN California Half-Yearly Meeting was welcomed on May 16th by Santa Monica Monthly Meeting. All member meetings except Riverside (which was not represented) gave brief state-of-the-meeting reports. These were generally affirmative, indicating growth in unity and fellowship. Many concerns were also expressed, especially regarding civil rights and the war in Vietnam.

Appointment of John Ullman as Clerk through 1966 was approved. It was agreed that one member of each monthly meeting's committee for ministry and counsel be appointed to meet once yearly with HYM's Committee for Ministry and Counsel to share mutual concerns for the spiritual life and health of the meetings. A committee was appointed to assist Los Angeles Meeting in furthering the development of the Westwood Worship Group. Another committee will seek an appropriate site for Pacific Yearly Meeting in 1967.

Pacific Ackworth's request to be recognized as a separate monthly meeting (effective July 1, 1965) was approved: a committee was appointed to oversee the new meeting's first year. HYM's School Committee will continue to work with Pacific Ackworth School to help the school relate more closely to Friends and to operate more effectively under Friends' principles. Under the aegis of its new president, Ed Morgenroth, Pacific Oaks School is providing national leadership to "Operation Head Start"; several Friends are participating in this effort.

Laying down of the Pacific Southwest Fellowship of Friends was approved, but this traditional midwinter fellowship of Friends from all of California, Arizona, and New Mexico will be continued under the auspices of Half-Yearly Meeting. PSWF officers will serve as a committee to arrange the 1966 meeting. Henceforth, the HYM state-of-the-Society report will be summarized by one monthly meeting each year, in rotation.

HYM approved a $200 fund to enable a young Friend and an adult member to attend the Conference on Race Relations at Earlham College in June. Judy Bruff is going to England to participate in the Quaker Youth Pilgrimage.

Hope was expressed that a United Nations conference with Friends could be held in San Francisco during June. It was also recommended that conversations between Pacific and California Yearly Meetings be continued and perhaps expanded. The possibility of establishing an office of the Friends World Committee on the Pacific Coast was considered.

Gretchen Tuthill reported briefly on her experiences in Washington, D.C. She will speak at greater length at Monthly Meetings if requested. Friends were asked to write to their congressmen supporting the pending immigration bills; a letter from HYM urging their passage was approved.

Rega Engsberg reported that a fund had been established to assist needy elderly Friends in the Friends' Retirement Home in Altadena. Hope was expressed that this home might eventually come under the care of HYM.

Young Friends of HYM will continue to meet on the third Sunday of each month at Phil and Marguerite Wells' home. The Hadleys will remain their advisors during the coming year.

Several Friends expressed disappointment that there was not sufficient time to explore possible membership in the Southern California Council of Churches. It was finally agreed that discussion of this issue will be the first item on the agenda in November.

ETHEL LONGENECKER, Pacific Ackworth Meeting

Friends' Attitudes Toward Poverty
By STEPHEN JEFFREY

The Social Order Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, hoping to stimulate individual and group discussion, recently sent out a questionnaire dealing with problems of poverty.

It asked for expressions of opinion on (1) the inevitability of poverty, (2) the seriousness of unemployment, (3) the freedom of private enterprise, (4) the role of labor unions, and (5) private initiative versus government programs. Replies were received from only 175 of the 8,000 Friends to whom this questionnaire was sent.

The first question asked if poverty was thought to be inevitable. Although 20 percent of the Friends answering said "yes," the majority felt that it would not be inevitable if a major war on poverty were launched to provide jobs and housing for all. Comments indicated that this "war on poverty" should take the form of increased education in the areas of self-improvement, birth control, and (most important) remaining unemployed for one time white persons.

A large majority felt that automation, racial discrimination, and the population explosion were major causes of unemployment. The joblessness of four million people creates a politically serious situation.

Private enterprise, most agreed, should be free insofar as it serves the public welfare; when it does not do this, the government should be allowed to intervene to protect the consumer, even at the cost of endangering private enterprise. (A number of persons pointed out, however, that free enterprise has been and will continue to be the greatest incentive for people to produce the most for the common need.)

Labor unions, the majority said, should play a leadership role, particularly in promoting social legislation in such areas as housing and urban renewal. An altruistic point of view was revealed in the opinion that, although unions should be concerned with the welfare of their members, their primary concern should be the general public. While the majority felt that unions should play a leadership role, many others commented that unions are becoming too powerful and could, quite conceivably, get out of hand.

In the area of private-initiative programs, a strong majority favored group medical programs, consumer cooperatives, and the facilitation of home ownership for low-income families. An even stronger majority favored scheduling the introduction of automation so as to permit reassignment of displaced employees. A unanimous vote was cast in favor of expanding private training and retraining programs for industrial and service jobs.

Stephen Jeffrey is an assistant to Daniel R. Conlon of Abington Meeting, Jenkintown, Pa., president of Instruments for Research and Industry in Cheltenham, Pa., who was responsible for conducting the survey described in this article. Copies of the questionnaire used are available from the Friends Social Order Committee, 1515 Cherry Street, Philadelphia 2.

Two questions which provoked great interest, but differences of opinions as well, had to do with retirement and with direct-action protests. The first of these was whether Friends favored or opposed adequately financed early voluntary retirement. Early retirement, some replied, makes an individual feel useless and at loose ends. Others pointed out that it can be coupled with teaching, working for the Peace Corps, or some equally rewarding activity.

A large number of Friends seemed disturbed at the thought that direct-action protests and boycotts might be used in attempting to eliminate job discrimination based on race, while others said that these techniques repeatedly have proved necessary in making progress toward racial equality. The question was raised as to just who would determine whether discrimination actually exists. Sound planning, temperate leadership, and a reconciling spirit were felt by many to be essential.

The last section of the questionnaire asked for viewpoints on a variety of proposed governmental programs. A clear majority favored reduction of taxes for lower-income groups to increase their purchasing power; extension of urban-renewal programs; continued Federal ownership of the TVA; and increasing Federal aid to public education. An even larger majority felt that Federal aid should be denied to school districts continuing to practice segregation.

Widely diverse opinion was evident in responses to the question of relief regulations being tightened to penalize mothers of illegitimate children and force men [on relief] to accept any job offered. Relief money, some thought, should be given out with more constructive restrictions. Several held that it would be permissible to force a man to accept a job as long as the job paid the minimum wage, but others felt that one should not penalize the mothers of illegitimate children, because this penalizes the children too. Several commented that there would be no occasion for illegitimate children with birth-control information adequately available to the general public.

Although most Friends clearly favored expansion of the “war on poverty” to provide work-and-study opportunities for all youth, some opposed government control of such a program, suggesting instead that local organizations be established to handle training and retraining programs.

While most Friends advocated cutting military expenditures in order to finance domestic and foreign economic-welfare programs, a few insisted that our very existence depends on the United States having the most and the best weapons in the world.

The small proportion of Friends who bothered to fill out and return the questionnaires leads one to wonder whether Friends do not feel deeply about the problems of poverty which affect thirty million fellow citizens. Obviously Friends do not share a common viewpoint on these problems. Perhaps there is need for discussions on this topic in local meeting forums and other groups.

Books Reviews

THE SEASONED MIND. By BRADFORD SMITH. Stephen Greene Press, Brattleboro, Vt., 1965. 40 pages. $3.50

What strikes the reader of Bradford Smith’s poems (a number of them written during his final illness) is their joyful wonder. Their subject matter is usually quite simple—a Vermont seascape, a popular blossom, the return of spring; but the poet evokes each scene in precise detail and makes it the starting point of the meditation of a richly stocked and sympathetic mind. Drawn into the interaction between scene and poet’s mind, we celebrate with him the goodness of life. Holding in balance the regret that life must end and the joy of seeing things so clearly, the poet lifts up in turn the objects, scenes, and experiences which have had meaning for him, seeing how, intermingled the self is with them, and then parts with them in benediction:

Too much, too much: already it is full.
So I embrace them all, embrace them all.

Bradford Smith’s poetry is marked by this desire to embrace all, not in despair but in love and trust—to know the particular but to see through it the universal. In “Ashes” he asks to lie under the lilac or the poplar, the pond or the grove,

Or anywhere, anywhere, so I but touch
This brimming world unrimmed by bone and breath
That knows, by yearly dying, how to conquer death.

Reflecting on how we discover our world “by grasping alphabets” and naming things, he wishes to turn back to find the unchanging one which underlies multiplicity.

End as begun:
The wonder of the one—
Ikhnaton and his Sun!

PAUL A. LACEY

THE COLLOQUIES OF ERASMUS. Translated by CRAIG R. THOMPSON. University of Chicago Press, 1965. 562+xxxiv pages. $15.00

Erasmus died in 1536. During the last eighteen years of his life and for two centuries thereafter, successive editions of The Colloquies poured from the presses of western Europe. Probably only the Bible was more widely read. Erasmus first wrote The Colloquies as examples of good Latin prose style for schoolboys. A textbook on composition that is for centuries a favorite book for civilized adults is worth looking at.

The first edition, in 1518, was published without Erasmus’ knowledge and somewhat to his dismay. But as it became popular he added to successive editions new essays that eventually discussed most of the human foibles and controversial issues of the time. There is scathing criticism of parental ambition that sacrifices a daughter’s health and happiness to an advantageous marriage. There is sympathetic amusement at the ignorant superstition of the humble; there is blazing wrath, expressed so wittily that even the victim was amused, at the greed which preyed on the ignorance and piety of the humble.

Erasmus was a pioneer in critical study of the text of the Bible. He was a forerunner of the Reformation who never left the Catholic Church, who admired Luther and deplored his extravagance. He believed so strongly in mercy that his criticism of all coercion in matters of faith caused all parties to distrust him. He deplored the boring profligacy of the soldier's life and was outraged at the arrogant stupidity of papal, imperial, and national policies that sacrificed true interests of human beings to the elusive phantom of power.
July 15, 1965

FRIENDS JOURNAL

365

The translator, who is librarian at Haverford College, introduces each colloquy with an explanatory note, giving its date, explaining the issue discussed, and identifying any of the characters who may have been drawn from life.

This is a book to browse in—one from which to receive little by little an impression of the personality of one of the great men of Europe whose spirit has something to say that is much needed today. It would be the perfect bedside book except that the mass of material makes it so bulky.

A competent reviewer, not ignorant of Latin, has remarked that Professor Thompson's English is as delightful as the Latin of Erasmus. RICHARD R. WOOD

YOUTH CONSIDERS "DO IT YOURSELF" RELIGION.

By MARTIN MARTY.

YOUTH ASKS "WHY BOTHER ABOUT GOD?" BY ALVIN ROGNESS.

YOUTH CONSIDERS SEX. By William Hulme.

Nelson, N. Y., 1965. $1.50 each.

Church Youth Research has engaged in six years of intensive effort in trying to understand more clearly "the beliefs, values, and conflicts of church youth," publishing its findings in a paperback series which tries to get away from Sunday School language.

Martin Marty attempts to deal with the "cultural" or "religion-in-general" atmosphere of our times. This phenomenon, without specific leaders and doctrines,craftly blends itself in with contemporary church and secular life. This reviewer feels that the Society of Friends is not completely immune from its wiles. Too many of us appear to believe that all religions are equally valid—that our differences are only ones of semantics or approach, and that we are all heading toward the same shore.

It is difficult for me to imagine many high school students reading Marty's book on their own. Too much time is spent on defining terms, and many more questions are raised than most of us can answer. However, as a reference document for a First-day school class, I can see it producing many hours of useful and stimulating discussion.

In Why Bother About God? the appetite of the reader is quickly whetted as the author states that "Doubt and faith belong together," and one can respond to his insight that "You must put limits on your doubts." To do, believe, or accept only those things which can be proved results in a paralyzed life. However, this auspicious beginning quickly disintegrates into a sugar-coated version of "that old-time religion." The title is indicative of an attempt to be modern, but the context travels a path which leads to a rather narrow understanding of God and Jesus Christ.

Youth Considers Sex presents this important realm of life in clear, direct, and penetrating terms. In the preface, Randolph Grump Miller points out that the author is attempting to help the reader to understand that "Sex becomes involved in our search for meaning." In his opening chapter William Hulme sets the stage by touching upon "Moral approach, religious approach, love as affection, love as responsibility, sex as vitality, sex for restraint, and sex for fun." He writes with beauty, feeling, and a profound insight into the sexual nature of man. Throughout the book he shows real awareness and understanding of the sexual problems, questions, and desires faced by youth.

This book is not only for senior-high youth, but is also important reading for parents of children approaching, or already in, the junior-high years. ELWOOD CRONK

VISITORS TO THE UNITED STATES AND HOW THEY SEE US. By BRYANT M. WEDGE. Van Nostrand, Princeton, N. J., 1965. 140 pages plus appendix. $4.95

As international relationships become daily more important, we can be grateful to anyone who undertakes to provide the background of understanding that allows one culture to speak to another. This book by Bryant M. Wedge, director of the Institute for the Study of National Behavior and a consultant to the Peace Corps, is drawn primarily from the experience of the escort-interpreters who serve the Department of State's foreign leader program, inaugurated in 1947. A well-organized effort has been made to present the major understandings and experiences gained from these visits. There is an appendix on method and a reading list which will help to document and complement the ideas expressed.

Nothing can quite replace personal experience in intercultural contact, but in considering the difficulties of talking between cultures Bryant Wedge has written a helpful volume.

JOHN M. SEXTON

POETRY: FROM STATEMENT TO MEANING. By JEROME BEATY and WILLIAM H. MATCHETT. Oxford University Press, N. Y., 1965. 331 pages. $5.75.

Routine, and the profits and losses of our lives, blunt our senses. A casual reader may, therefore, look dull-eyed at a poem. Perhaps understanding its statement to the letter, he may miss its spirit as a whole.

An exceptionally good poet and Friend, William H. Matchett of the University of Washington, and Jerome Beaty of Emory University have, step by step, probed sources of meaning in "the poem itself." They begin by using paraphrase: thus, the poem depends on ordinary meanings of words and sentences. They proceed to examine how words are used beyond ordinary meanings, as words must be in significant poetry—much as a mind must shake loose from lethargy in order to feel beauty, wonder, or any fine quickening.

If poetry begins with what can be stated in prose, it moves on to tap every possible resource of language appropriate to its pattern. Sounds and rhythms; implicatious, tone, and analogies; images, symbols, and silences—all these can be superbly interwoven. "Idea controls sound, just as sound controls idea. . . . In fact, all the elements of poetry are formative" and interact. To show this, the authors analyze poems of many ages and forms, with liberal use of the modern. This is a thorough, quietly persuasive book. SAM BRADLEY
Friends and Their Friends

A new Monthly Meeting is that at Newark, Delaware, which was formally organized on June 25th as part of Western Quarterly Meeting of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. It holds its meetings for worship at 10 a.m. on Sundays at the Wesley Student Center, 192 South College Avenue, Newark.

Currently representing the AFSC abroad are seventeen American families with a total of forty-eight children, according to the summer issue of Quaker Service, the AFSC bulletin, which adds that "Service Committee families are realistic about the problems involved in overseas service, but most of them seem to feel that the values of the experience—shared service, increased family closeness, and a world-stretching adventure—by far outweigh the disadvantages." In AFSC parents' opinion the children who have most to gain from a period abroad are those aged from six to twelve, who are quick to make friends in new situations.

The Friends Neighborhood Guild of Philadelphia is one of ten settlement houses in the Delaware Valley which have been approved for participation in the employment program authorized by the U. S. Economic Opportunities Act. As a result of this financial aid the Guild is able this summer to employ over forty young people in its various summer programs such as its Play Parade, its Theatre Caravan, its new Education and Arts Program, and others.

Earlham’s Experiment in Classroom Auditors. "An obstacle to better college teaching," according to the June 11th issue of Time, "is the defensive notion that a teacher compromises his freedom if he allows anyone except students to enter his classroom and evaluate his performance. This sanctification of the classroom not only cuts the teacher off from useful criticism but also gives administrators a handy excuse to argue that good teaching cannot be judged, and that therefore a teacher's rewards have to be based on his publications" (as discussed by Dorothy M. Williams in her "Publish or Perish" in this issue of the Journal).

"Challenging this notion," Time adds, "is small, Quaker-founded Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana, which recently received from the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis a $20,000 grant to make it possible for Earlham teachers to invite experts in their fields to visit their classrooms, observe their techniques, and assess their abilities." This experiment had its inauguration in May, when a first-year English lecturer invited one of his former professors from the University of Chicago to attend his lectures, with the result that the visiting professor provided most helpful criticisms and suggestions. Other faculty members plan to follow his example.

Since the Earlham program is voluntary and the experts' evaluations are not confined to administrators, it poses no threat to the teacher.
Swarthmore College and Wade House (a settlement house in Chester, Pa.) are joint sponsors of two racially integrated summer projects, one a study program for those about to enter high school, the other a workcamp project for anyone fifteen or older.

The study program, using facilities of both the college and Swarthmore Friends Meeting, is providing about fifty students with opportunities for study, cultural enrichment, and recreation. It will continue until August 6th.

The workcamp project, known as the “Chester Home Improvement Program,” consists of a series of work camps similar to those pioneered by the Friends Social Order Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Volunteers (coming individually or in groups) assist in rehabilitating homes of lower-income residents. New participants will be welcomed at any time before the project’s closing date, August 13th, while loans of small tools and donations of paint, plaster, glass, and other building materials are also needed. For further information, those interested may call Lowell Livezy, KI 3-2299.

A newly opened bookstore at Powell House, New York Yearly Meeting’s conference and retreat center, has the combined purposes of helping to build up the center’s library and of providing a literature-supply service for the area. In addition to having in stock books and pamphlets of interest to Friends (with particular emphasis on religious-education materials), the bookstore will endeavor to fill orders for any other books desired. Orders for and communications about books should be addressed to Pearl Hall, Powell House, Old Chat­ham, New York.

Protestantism in East Germany has almost disappeared, according to the News Service of the Canadian Council of Churches, which reports that the number of acknowledged Protestants in that area has shrunk from over three million in 1939 to only thirty-five thousand now.

AFSC work in Algeria, where for several years the Service Committee has maintained teams in both the west and the east, is now being consolidated into a single program, with headquarters at Skikda. Programs in the Tlemcen (western) region will be turned over to local groups. The reason for the change is the growing ability and eagerness of local Algerian groups to operate their own training programs. This is, of course, an outcome toward which the AFSC always works. Similar transfers of responsibility for programs inaugurated by the Service Committee have taken place recently in Pakistan and Jordan.

Most of the local training programs operated by Friends will be taken over by Algeria’s Ministry of Youth and Sport. The Ministry of Health will operate the maternal and child health centers organized by the AFSC.

Meanwhile, a number of Algerian villages are eager for AFSC help in such basic community-development projects as draining swamps, repairing bridges, and constructing new irrigation systems. Since government funds are not available for these projects, they will be undertaken on a self-help basis.

“Westtown . . . was most beneficial to me. But my religious training there can best be described by the old German saying, ‘We get too soon old and too late smart.’” So runs a recent letter from a non-Quaker business man who in youth attended the Quaker boarding school. “I got nothing out of meeting,” he continues. “All ‘W’s’ sat in the last row or two. This made meeting an ideal place for studying, reading, sleeping, etc.” He adds, however, that “Today, worship in the Quaker tradition truly appeals to me.”

The new Upland Institute at Chester, Pa., which is scheduled to open in September, includes among the Quaker-oriented members of its faculty and visiting-lecturer staff George Willoughby, George R. Lakey, Kenneth E. Boulding, Robert Wallace Gilmore, and Bayard Rustin. The Institute, located on the grounds of Crozer Theological Seminary, has for its objective the training of men and women for nonviolent leadership in the field of social change and social conflict.

Euell Gibbons, Quaker author whose Stalking the Wild Asparagus (1962) and Stalking the Blue-Eyed Scallop (1964) have been added to the White House library, will be further honored by the inclusion in Boston University’s new center for study and research in contemporary literature of a collection of his writings described by a university official as a “distinguished nucleus” for the center’s library of papers, manuscripts, and correspondence files of modern authors.

Stalking the Healing Herbs, latest in Euell Gibbons’ series of books on unorthodox foods, is scheduled for publication in 1966. (“Inspiration,” most recent of his many poetic contributions to the Journal’s pages, appeared in the July 1st issue.)

Possibly a new high in ecumenicity is to be found in the procedure reported by the British Peace News under the head “Whitsun Pilgrimage for Peace.” At one stage of this elaborately staged pilgrimage its participants all assembled in the Friends Meeting House at Canterbury, where a Catholic priest, assisted by an Anglican clergyman, a Congregationalist clergyman, and the chairman of the Friends Peace Committee, conducted a Roman Catholic service.

“Crisis Without Violence” is the title of a booklet recently published by the Anti-Defamation League of New York as a case history of the experience last summer of the city of New Rochelle, New York. When confronted with a potentially explosive racial situation, New Rochelle (guided by its Human Rights Commission) successfully avoided violence and created a better community climate by giving a fair hearing to all protests and by seeking just solutions to the problems at issue. Author of the pamphlet (which may be obtained at fifty cents a copy from the Anti-Defamation League at 515 Lexington Avenue, New York) is Alexander F. Miller, the League’s national community relations director and the volunteer chairman of New Rochelle’s Human Rights Commission.
ete sets of Quaker magazines, including Friends, Friends Intelligences, and The Friend, are very much wanted by the new Friends World College, which will, of course, reimburse senders for shipping charges. (By a "complete set" is meant all issues of a periodical during a calendar year.) Inquiries or communications on this subject should be sent to Morris Mitchell at the college's temporary address, Harrow Hill, Glen Head, Long Island, New York.

William H. Matchett of Seattle's University Meeting, co-author of Poetry: From Statement to Meaning (reviewed elsewhere in this issue), was "poet-in-residence" for a weekend recently at the John Woolman School near Nevada City, California, where he visited English classes, met with faculty and students, and participated in an evening of poetry reading. His visit, sponsored by the Friends Council on Education, was part of the school's newly developed guest-artist program.

The Little Choir of Germantown (Philadelphia) Friends School is making a concert tour of Europe again this summer, as it did in 1956 and 1962.

The problem of what to do about the "chronic, habitual, and repetitive speaker who Sunday after Sunday gives us the same medicine in the same twelve-minute dosage" in meetings for worship is the concern voiced by George C. Hardin in a letter to the editor of the Friends Bulletin of Pacifc Yearly Meeting. "It is not enough to say that we must love these speakers," he concludes. "We do love them, as well as we can, but I find myself rebelling when worship is taken over as a forum and grindstone, and sometimes feel like standing up, saying nothing, until the speaker sitteth down. Nonviolent direct action, would it be?"

Work camps are a fairly common phenomenon among Friends, but how many have tried the variety reported by Minneapolis Meeting, where "Junior Young Friends" staged a work camp early this summer in order to improve the Meeting's own landscape gardening by planting shrubs around the meeting house?

"Journey Into History" by Caroline Nicholson Jacob, a brief sketch of three hundred years of Quaker history in Ireland, is available in the form of an attractively printed and illustrated booklet which may be obtained at the price of thirty cents a copy from Friends World Committee, 152-A North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Thomas Kelly's "Reality of the Spiritual World" and his "The Gathered Monthly" have just been reprinted together in a three-shilling edition published in England as part of the "Quaker Classics" series by the Friends Home Service Committee (Friends House, Euston Road, London N.W. 1).

Problems similar to Vietnam's are likely to produce Vietnam-like crises in many other countries of Southern Asia, according to Russell Johnson, who has just returned from four years spent as director of the American Friends Service Committee's International Seminars and Conferences Program in Southern Asia. "To face this situation adequately," he observes, "the American people must get over the feeling that when anything goes wrong anywhere in the world it is the result of a Communist conspiracy." Among the problems he mentions are the aftereffects of colonialism, an unbalanced nationalism, nepotism, the caste system, a fatalistic and passive philosophy, the inverse balance of trade, the population explosion, and foreign intervention.

A major campaign for repeal of death-penalty statutes has been announced by the American Civil Liberties Union. This decision by the ACLU's board of directors, arrived at after a two-year study of the problem, reverses the ACLU's earlier stand that capital punishment is not an infringement of civil liberties. The nationwide organization not only will seek elimination of the death penalty both through the courts and through legislative action to repeal existing capital-punishment statutes, but also will seek commutation of existing death sentences.

Friendship Farms and other group projects of Church World Service's CROP program for feeding the world's hungry include nine farms in Indiana which were affected by the recent midwestern tornadoes. Although severely damaged by the tornadoes, and though some of their owners' relatives and friends had been killed, these farms nevertheless did their share in planting corn and soybeans during a spring drive for increased participation in CROP's program, which was initiated in 1963 by a group of Indiana farmers near Goshen.

AFSC East-West Seminar in Thailand

Five religions and twelve countries were represented by the thirty young people who in May attended an international seminar in Thailand sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee. The conference theme was: "Our Changing Values; Encounter of East and West." Participants came from Thailand, India, Pakistan, Malaysia, Vietnam, Laos, Japan, the United Kingdom, Belgium, Spain, the United States, and Canada.

After three days in Bangkok, where the group encountered some of the changing and enduring traditions in Thai culture (including a religious festival at the home of a member of the royal family) the scene shifted to Chiangmai, center of northern Thai culture and second largest city in Thailand. Here members of the seminar settled for two weeks, engaging each other in formal and informal discussions on the technological, sociological, and political impact of the West upon the East.

There was some controversy, but all the young people valued greatly having the opportunity for debate. At the seminar's conclusion one participant from Vietnam said: "This was the most exciting episode of my life."
Southern Appalachian Friends

The Southern Appalachian Association of Friends, which has a widely scattered membership in an area bounded on the north by Berea, Kentucky, on the east by Celina, North Carolina, on the south by Atlanta, Georgia, and on the west by Nashville, Tennessee, held its annual conference early in May, with eighty-nine Friends in attendance. The scene of the conference was Crossville, Tennessee.

Special guests from outside the area included Dean Freiday of New Jersey (representing Friends World Committee and Friends General Conference), Glenn Reese of Indiana (representing Five Years Meeting), Dan Wilson of Pendle Hill (Wallingford, Pa.), and Irving and Mary Smith of Iowa (representing Friends Committee on National Legislation). Leaders of adult discussion groups were John and June Yangblut of Quaker House in Atlanta, while leaders of programs for teen-agers and younger children were Gene and Nancy Cherry, Ron Mattson, Marian Fuson, Nelson Fuson, and Maie and Dave Klaphaak.

In the course of the conference Southern Appalachian Friends initiated three projects: a peace action fund, a plan of assistance to Ronald E. Mattson in the inauguration of an area-wide intervisitation program, and the establishing of the Walter House Memorial Fund to aid young Friends of junior and senior high school age in developing leadership abilities.

Friends' Race Relations Conference

At the National Conference of Friends on Race Relations, held at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, June 18-21, there was a total registration of 257 persons from eighteen Yearly Meetings.

The Conference issued a statement calling on Friends everywhere to recognize the civil rights movement as part of the worldwide thrust of oppressed peoples for freedom, justice, and security; to seek new means of bringing to bear the spirit of nonviolence and the rule of law; to support the movement for family planning, recognizing the role of population expansion in leading to new forms of violence in an overcrowded world; and to work for such changes in our economic structure and in public education as will assure freedom from want, the development of each person's talents, and avoidance of the tragedies of depersonalization and facelessness.

John Yangblut of Atlanta was named chairman of the committee to plan the next conference, to be held in 1967 somewhere in the southeastern part of the United States. Victor Paschkis of New York was named coordinator for the next two years.

Other committee members are Marion Adair, Toledo, Ohio; Arthur Emory, Fayette County, Tenn.; Marian Fuson, Nashville, Tenn.; Wade Mackie, Baton Rouge, La.; Caroline Estes, Berkeley, Calif.; Chester Graham, Chicago; George Hardin, Philadelphia; and George Sawyer, Richmond, Indiana. Herbert Huffman will represent Friends United Meeting on the committee; George Corwin, Friends General Conference; and Herbert Hadley, Friends World Committee. Six additional members of the committee will be appointed after consultation with the Yearly Meetings, especially those in the Southeast.

Letters to the Editor

Ethical Culture, Social Service, or Christian?

I share Douglas Steere's concern (Friends Journal, June 15) that the Society of Friends is in danger of “turning into an ethical culture society.” He rightly says “whenever the ingredient of the historical Christian disclosure is neglected, the result is an ultimate collapse of the very experience itself.”

At a recent meeting for worship I expressed my firm belief that the Society of Friends should remain Christian. I was immediately challenged by a Friend who said many of our members are not Christians and that he saw no reason for continuing to emphasize that tradition.

Truly, we are in danger of becoming either an ethical culture society or a social service agency or both. If we cease to be actively and earnestly Christian, I see little reason for our continued existence.

New York City

Howard E. Kershner

"Premature Announcement"

It is regretted that in the May 15th Friends Journal a premature announcement appeared concerning the establishment of a Peace Center at our new meeting house. Harrisburg Friends have agreed to explore the possibility of a Peace Center with other groups, but as yet no definite plans have been formulated.

Elton Smith, Clerk

Harrisburg, Pa.

Harrisburg Monthly Meeting

Roots of Intemperance

There are two queries on temperance in the Faith and Practice of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. I am disturbed by one of them.

We are asked, “What are you doing to encourage total abstinence and remove the causes of intemperance?” This is out of kilter with our witness today. Most of us find no harm in our friend’s dinner cocktails (if he is not driving). 'To discourage him from these because alcohol, in excess, leads to lack of self-control or has ill effects on the body, or because he or his son might become alcoholic, would seem self-righteous. If I have some special reason to distrust his self-control, I should be ready to help, but not simply to tell him to quit drinking.

The social evils giving rise to and arising from alcoholism and heavy drinking are more complex than some imply. The discovery of Alcoholics Anonymous was that, once psychological and social problems were overcome and confidence was regained, the physical habituating element of alcohol could be resisted. A former alcoholic needs to be encouraged to be an abstainer. However, a heavy drinker not yet alcoholic may need help in social and psychological problems.

"To encourage total abstinence and remove the causes of intemperance" sounds coldly indifferent. Our concern is for the alcoholic and for the failure of society to make help available to a man trapped in heavy drinking and in his inability to solve deeply rooted personal problems. We ought to write a query that will express this concern and challenge us. This will better help us to answer "Am I my brother’s keeper?"
Announcements

Brief notices of Friends' births, marriages, and deaths are published in the FRIENDS JOURNAL without charge. Such notices (preferably typed, and containing only essential facts) will not be published unless furnished by the family or the Meeting.

MARRIAGES

CLAFFIE-REGEN—On June 9, at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Plainfield, N. J., Barbara Lee Reegen, daughter of Curt and Rosalie Reegen, and Gerald Michael Claffie, son of Mrs. Gerald L. Claffie. The bride and her parents are members of Rahway and Plainfield Meeting, Plainfield, N. J.

The Catholic ceremony was followed by a Quaker period of silence during which messages were given by three members of New York Yearly Meeting.

RILEY-SILCOX—On June 20, in Gladwyne, Pa., Louise Evans Silcox, daughter of Louis E. Silcox, M.D., and Ruth Evans Silcox, and William Crenshaw Riley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph William Riley. The bride and her parents are members of Haverford (Pa.) Meeting.

DEATHS

BRANSON—On June 9, Emma S. Taylor Branson, aged 82, wife of the late Oliver Branson. A member of Haverford (Pa.) Meeting, she is survived by a daughter, Helen Branson Decher.

HILLIGAS—On April 19, at Bowerstown, Ohio, Erin Fox Hilligas, wife of Clarence G. Hilligas. She was a former member of Shores Cross Meeting. Surviving, in addition to her husband, are two sons and a daughter by a late first husband, William Wilson McLaughlin: Francis Fox and James Alfred McLaughlin, and Dorothy Lorraine Miller, all of Salem, Ohio.

LUPON—On June 1, at Madison, Wis., after a long illness, Mildred Hathaway Lupon, wife of Hugh S. Lupon. Funeral services and burial were at Hopewell Friends Meeting House, near Clearbrook, Va., on June 4th, her 60th birthday. Surviving, in addition to her husband, are a son, David Walker Lupon, and two grandchildren, Edward Hugh and Caroline of Lafayette, Ind.

MA Gill—On June 10, at Doylestown (Pa.) Hospital, Florence Keisler Magill, aged 88, wife of the late John A. Magill. A member of Solebury (Pa.) Meeting, she is survived by a daughter, Nellie Magill Carter of Turlington, Pa.

PANCOAST—On June 11, in Woodstown, N. J., after a long illness, Mary S. Pancoast, aged 90, of the late Leonidas Pancoast. She was a member of Salem Monthly Meeting in Woodstown.

PHILIPS—On May 30, Anne Hillborn Philips, aged 94, wife of the late Jesse W. Phillips. A member of Wilmington (Del.) Meeting, she is survived by two stepdaughters, Anne P. Blake and Helen P. Henley; five grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

SMITH—On June 8, at Taylor Hospital, Ridley Park, Pa., Frank F. Smith, aged 76, husband of the late Margaret Harvey Smith. A member of Kennett Meeting, he is survived by three brothers, George, Harvey, and Joseph, all of Wilmington, Del., and three sisters, Clara Conlyn, Mildred Donavan, and Edna Tavon of Wilmington.

WEBB—On April 21, at Avondale, Pa., Edward A. Webb, V.M.D., aged 60, husband of Anna Passmore Webb. A member of the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, he is survived also by a daughter, Ruth Webb Harrison; a son, William P. Webb; and four grandchildren.

WHITE—On May 26, in the Salem County Memorial Hospital, Wilmer F. White, a member of Woodstown (N.J.) Meeting.

Coming Events

Written notice of Yearly and Quarterly Meeting activities and of other events of general interest must be received at least fifteen days before date of publication.

JULY

15—Western Quarterly Meeting. London Grove Meeting House, Route 926, west of Kennett Square, Pa., Worship and Ministry, 9 a.m. Worship, 10 a.m. Business, 10:45. Lunch, 1 p.m.

16—Edwin B. Bronner of Haverford College will speak on friends’ meeting houses and educational institutions in Philadelphia area, WCAU-TV, Philadelphia, 7:30-8 a.m.

18—Millville-Muncy Quarterly Meeting, Elk Falls Meeting House, near Shunk, Pa. (northwest of Emlen, on Route 154). Worship, 10:30 a.m. Afternoon session, 1:30 p.m. Speaker: Florence L. Kite, former executive secretary, Race Relations Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting.

18—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., Brick Meeting House, corner Routes 272 and 273, Calvert, Md. Visitors welcome.

25 (also August 29)—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., Old Kennett Meeting House, Route 1, half mile east of Humorton, Pa.

25 (also August 1)—“The Light Within.” WCAU-TV, Philadelphia, 7:30-8 a.m. Representatives of American Friends Service Committee and Philadelphia Yearly Meeting will discuss activities of these groups.

31—Joint session of Chester and Concord Quarterly Meetings, Westtown (Pa.) School, 5 p.m. (This will supplant Concord Quarterly Meeting previously scheduled for August 7.)

AUGUST

1 (also September 5)—Plumstead Meeting House, Gardenville, Bucks County, Pa., will be open for worship, 11 a.m.

1—“The Light Within.” WCAU-TV, Philadelphia, 7:30-8 a.m. (See July 25 listing.)

3-8—Germany Yearly Meeting, Bad Pyrmont, Germany. Address correspondence to Quakerhau, Planckstrasse 20, 168 Berlin 8, Germany.

6-11—Baltimore Yearly Meetings (Stony Run and Homewood), Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. Principal speakers: Francis B. Hall, Bliss Forush, Kennedi Boulding, Young Friends and Junior Yearly Meeting.

15-19—Pacific Yearly Meeting, St. Mary’s College, Morago, Calif. Correspondent: Edwin C. Morganroth, 2721 - 5th Avenue, Corona del Mar, Calif.

15—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., Brick Meeting House, corner Routes 272 and 273, Calvert, Md. Visitors welcome.

Note: Rancocas (N. J.) Meeting for worship, 10 a.m. (DST), June 20-September 12.

Pawlet Preparative Meeting, Philadelphia, has discontinued regular meetings at the Christian Association Building (U. of Pa.) until September 12.

MEETING ADVERTISEMENTS

NOTE: This is not a complete Meeting directory. Some Meetings advertise in each issue of the journal and others at less frequent intervals, while some do not advertise at all.

Arizona

PHOENIX—Sundays: 9:45 a.m., adult study; 11 a.m. meeting for worship and First-day School, 17th Street and Glendale Avenue. Cleo Cox, Clerk, 4731 North 24th Place, Phoenix.

TUCSON—Pima Friends Meeting (Pacific Yearly Meeting), 2447 N. Los Altos Avenue. Worship, 10:00 a.m. Barbara Elfrondt, Clerk, 1602 South via Emlora, 624-3924.

California

BERKELEY—Unprogrammed meeting, Firstdays, 11 a.m., 2151 Vine St., 443-9728.

CARMEL—Meeting for worship, Sundays, 10:30 a.m., Lincoln near 7th.

CLAIREMONT—Meeting for worship and Sunday School, 8:30 a.m., 727 Harrison Ave. Leonard Dart, Clerk, 421 W. 8th St.
FRIENDS JOURNAL

District of Columbia

WASHINGTON—Meeting, Sunday, 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. First-day School, 10:30 a.m., 2111 Florida Avenue, N.W., one block from Connecticut Avenue.

Florida

DAYTONA BEACH—Meeting for worship, Sunday 11 a.m., 291 Santa Juan Avenue.

Fort Lauderdale Area—1739 N.E. 18th Ave. Fourth Sunday at 7:30 p.m., or call 566-2566.

GAINESVILLE—1911 N.W. 2nd Ave. Meeting and First-day School, 11 a.m.

Georgia

ATLANTA—Meeting for worship and First-day School, 10 a.m., 1384 Fairview Rd., N.E., Atlanta 6. Phone 378-7905. Patricia Wanstell, Clerk. Phone 373-9141.

Illinois

CHICAGO—57th Street, Worship, 11 a.m., 5615 Woodlawn. Monthly Meeting every first Friday, 7:30 p.m. Phone 303-660.

LAKE FOREST—10 a.m., Sundays, Deepartment School, 95 W. Deepartment. Clerk, Elizabeth Simpson. Phone 337-5412.

PEORIA—Meeting, Sundays, 11 a.m., 912 N. University. Phone 674-5794.

URBANA—CHAMPAIGN—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., 37 W. Green St. Urbana-Clark. Phone 363-5234.

Iowa

DES MOINES—South entrance, 2920 30th Street; worship, 10 a.m.; classes, 11 a.m.

Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS—Friends meeting each Sunday. For information telephone UN 1-9202 or 891-2584.

Maryland

BALTIMORE—Stony Run Meeting, 5118 N. Charles Street, Worship, 11 a.m. Tel. ID 5-3778.

EASTON—Third Haven Meeting and First-day school, 11 a.m., South Washington St.

Massachusetts

ACTON—Meeting for worship and First-day School, Sunday, 10:00 a.m., Women’s Club.

CAMBRIDGE—Meeting, Sunday, 5 Longfellow Park (near Harvard Square), 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m.; telephone TR 6-5683.

NANTUCKET—Sundays, 10:45 a.m., through July and August, Historic Fair Street Meeting House.

South Yarmouth, Cape Cod—Worship and First-day School, 10 a.m.

Wellesley—Meeting, Sunday, 10:30 a.m. at Tenacre Country Day School, Devereux Street near Grove Street.

West Falmouth, Cape Cod—Rt. 28 A, meeting for worship, Sunday 11 a.m.

Westport—Meeting, Sunday, 10:45 a.m. Central Village; Clerk: J. K. Stewart Kirkaldy. Phone: 363-7471.

Worcester—Pleasant Street Friends Meeting, 901 Pleasant Street. Meeting for worship each first-Day, 11 a.m. Telephone FL 4-3067.

Michigan

ANN ARBOR—Meeting for worship, 10 a.m., Meeting House, 3345 Hill St., call 662-6089.

Detroit—Meeting, Sundays, 11 a.m., Highland Park YWCA, Woodward and Wlnona, TO 9-7141 evenings.

Detroit—Friends Church, 9449 Sorrento Sunday School, 10 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m.; John G. Harrold, Acting Clerk, 7311 Appolino, Dearborn, Mich. 48175.

MINNEAPOLIS—Meeting, 11 a.m.; First-day School, 10 a.m., 44th Street and York Avenue S. Harold N. Taylorson, Minister 4421 Abbott Avenue S.; phone WA 6-8387.

MINNEAPOLIS—Two Cities; unprogrammed worship, 10:15 a.m., University Y.M.C.A., FE 5-9272.

Missouri

KANSAS CITY—Penn Valley Meeting, 306 West 39th Street, 10:00 a.m. Call HI 4-0886 or CL 2-6950.

St. Louis—Meeting, 2359 Rockford Avenue, Rock Hill, 10:30 a.m.; phone PA 1-6976.

Nebraska

LINCOLN—Meeting for worship, 10:45 a.m., 3319 South 48th Street. Phone 488-4178.

Nevada

RENO—Meeting Sunday, 11:00 a.m., 1127 Evans Avenue. Phone 329-1318.

New Hampshire

DOVER—Meeting, First-day, 11 a.m., Central Avenue, Dover.

Hanover—Eastern Vermont, Western New Hampshire. Meeting for worship and First-day School, D.C.U. Lounge, College Hall, 9:30 a.m., June 20 to September 12. Avery Harrington, Clerk.

Monadnock—Southwestern N.H. Meeting for worship, 10 a.m., The Meeting School, Rindge, N.H.

New Jersey

ATLANTIC CITY—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.; First-day School, 10:30 a.m.; South Carolina and Pacific Avenues.

DOVER—First-day School, 10:45 a.m.; worship, 11:15 a.m. Quaker Church Rd., just off Rt. 30.

Haddonfield—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.; First-day School, 10:45 a.m., Lake Street.

Manasquan—First-day School, 10 a.m., meeting, 11:15 a.m., Route 35 at Manasquan Circle. Walter Longstreet, Clerk.

Montclair—269 Park Street, First-day School and worship, 11 a.m. Visitors welcome.
RIDGWOOD—Summer schedule through July and August. Meeting for worship at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., 224 Highwood Ave.

SEAVILLE—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m. Main Shore Road, Route 9, Cape May County. Visitors welcome.

New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE—Meeting and First-day School, 10:30 a.m., 153 Girard Blvd., N.E. Dorellin Bunting, Clerk. Phone 344-1149.

SANTA FE—Meeting, Sundays, 11 a.m., Olive Rush Studio, 683 Canyon Road, Santa Fe. Jane H. Haumann, Clerk.

New York

ALBANY—Worship and First-day School, 11 a.m., 727 Madison Ave.; phone 465-9984.

BUFFALO—Meeting and First-day School, 11 a.m., 72 N. Parade; phone TX 2-8643.

CHAPPARAS—Quaker Road (Rt. 120). First-day School, 9:30 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m. 914 Cl, #886 or 014 MA #1817.

CLINTON—Meeting, Sundays, 11 a.m., 2nd floor, Kirkland Art Center, College St.

LONG ISLAND—Northern Boulevard at Shelter Rock Road. First-day School, 9:45 a.m.; meeting, 11 a.m.

NEW YORK—First-day meetings for worship, 11 a.m. 221 E. 15th St., Manhattan 2 Washington Sq. N. Earl Hall, Columbia University 110 Schermerhorn St., Brooklyn 220 10th Ave., between 10th and 11th Sts., New York, N.Y.

RE-UPHOLSTER SLIP COVER CHAIR $69.50, LAKESHORE AND MISC. 175-9829.

WORSHIP
cAMPUS MEETING, First-day School, 10 a.m.; meeting for worship, 11:15 a.m.

CHESTER—24th and Chestnut Street. Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

DOYLESTOWN—East Oakdale Avenue. Meeting for worship and First-day School, 11 a.m.

HARRISBURG—Meeting and First-day School, 10:30 a.m. Girards St.

HAVERTOWN—Back Lane, between Lancaster Pike and Haverson Road. First-day School, 10:30 a.m. Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

LANCASTER—Meeting house, Tulane Terrace, 74 1/2 miles west of Lancaster. Off U.S. 30. Meeting and First-day School, 10 a.m.

LANDSDOWNE—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m. 9:45 a.m. Landstown and Stewart Aves.

MEDIA—Providence Meeting. Providence Road, Media, 15 miles west of Philadelphia. First-day School, 9:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

MUNCY—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., Mary F. Bussler, Clerk. Tel. LI 6-5796.

NEWTON—Bucks Co., near George School. Meeting, 11 a.m. First-day School, 10 a.m. Monthly Meeting, first Fifth-day, 7:30 p.m.

PHILADELPHIA—Meetings, 10:30 a.m. unless specified; telephone LO 8-4111 for information about First-day Schools.

BERBY, one mile east of Roosevelt Boulevard at Southampton Road, 11 a.m. Central Philadelphia, 29 South 12th. Chestnut Hill, 100 E. Mermaid Ln., 10 a.m. Fair Hill, Germantown and Cambria, 10 a.m. Fair Apartments, 1st- and 2nd-Fifth Days. Frankford Meeting held jointly at Unity and Wain Sts., 11 a.m.

Germantown Meeting, 47 W. Couetter Street (held jointly with Green Street Meeting at Couetter Street address.) Green Street Meeting held jointly with Germantown Meeting at Coucher Street address. Powellton, not meeting until September 12th.

PITTSBURGH—Worship, 10:30 a.m.; adult class, 11:45 a.m. Central Pittsburgh, 838 Shady Avenue.

READING—First-day School, 10 a.m., meeting, 11 a.m. 108 North Sixth Street.

STATE COLLEGE—318 South Atherton Street. First-day School, 9:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 10:45 a.m.

SWARTHMORE—Witith Place, College campus. Adult Forum. First-day School, 9:45 a.m. Worship, 11:00 a.m.

WEST CHESTER—400 N. High St. First-day School, 10:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 10:45 a.m. Fourth Day, 7:30 p.m., Hickman Home.

Rhode Island

JAMESTOWN—Conant Meeting, First-days July, August, and on Sept. 5, 10:30 a.m.

Pennsylvania

ABINGTON—Greenwood Ave. and Meeting House, Jenkintown. First-day School, 10 a.m.; meeting for worship, 11:15 a.m.

CHESTER—24th and Chestnut Street. Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

DOYLESTOWN—East Oakdale Avenue. Meeting for worship and First-day School, 11 a.m.

HARRISBURG—Meeting and First-day School, 10:30 a.m. Girards St.

HAVERTOWN—Back Lane, between Lancaster Pike and Haverson Road. First-day School, 10:30 a.m. Meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

LANCASTER—Meeting house, Tulane Terrace, 74 1/2 miles west of Lancaster. Off U.S. 30. Meeting and First-day School, 10 a.m.

LANDSDOWNE—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m. 9:45 a.m. Landstown and Stewart Aves.

MEDIA—Providence Meeting, Providence Road, Media, 15 miles west of Philadelphia. First-day School, 9:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 11 a.m.

MUNCY—Meeting for worship, 11 a.m., Mary F. Bussler, Clerk. Tel. LI 6-5796.

NEWTON—Bucks Co., near George School. Meeting, 11 a.m. First-day School, 10 a.m. Monthly Meeting, first Fifth-day, 7:30 p.m.

PHILADELPHIA—Meetings, 10:30 a.m. unless specified; telephone LO 8-4111 for information about First-day Schools.

BERBY, one mile east of Roosevelt Boulevard at Southampton Road, 11 a.m. Central Philadelphia, 29 South 12th. Chestnut Hill, 100 E. Mermaid Ln., 10 a.m. Fair Hill, Germantown and Cambria, 10 a.m. Fair Apartments, 1st- and 2nd-Fifth Days. Frankford Meeting held jointly at Unity and Wain Sts., 11 a.m.

Germantown Meeting, 47 W. Couetter Street (held jointly with Green Street Meeting at Couetter Street address.) Green Street Meeting held jointly with Germantown Meeting at Coucher Street address. Powellton, not meeting until September 12th.

PITTSBURGH—Worship, 10:30 a.m.; adult class, 11:45 a.m. Central Pittsburgh, 838 Shady Avenue.

READING—First-day School, 10 a.m., meeting, 11 a.m. 108 North Sixth Street.

STATE COLLEGE—318 South Atherton Street. First-day School, 9:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 10:45 a.m.

SWARTHMORE—Witith Place, College campus. Adult Forum. First-day School, 9:45 a.m. Worship, 11:00 a.m.

WEST CHESTER—400 N. High St. First-day School, 10:30 a.m.; meeting for worship, 10:45 a.m. Fourth Day, 7:30 p.m., Hickman Home.

Oregon

PORTLAND-MULTNOMAH—Friends Meeting, 10 a.m., 4512 S. E. Stark Street, Portland, Oregon. Phone AT 7-7934.

Tennessee

KNOXVILLE—First-day School, 10 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m. Dr. W. Newton, 288-0067.

MEMPHIS—Meeting and First-day School, Sundays, 9:30 a.m. Eldon E. House, Clerk. Phone 275-6829.

Texas

DALLAS—Sunday, 10:30 a.m., Adventist Church, 4609 N. Central Expressway, Clerk, Kenneth Carroll, Religion Dept., S.M.U.; Fl. 2-866.

HOUSTON—Live Oak Friends Meeting, Sundays, 11 a.m., Cora Peden, Y.W.C.A., 11209 Clematis St. Clerk, Lohn Bruckman, Jackson 8-6413.

Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE—Meeting and First-day School, 10 a.m., also meeting First and Third Sundays, 7:30 p.m., Madison Hall, Univ., Y.M.C.A.

McLEAN—Langley Hill Meeting, Sunday, 11 a.m. First-day School, 10:30 a.m. Junction old Route 123 and Route 193.

Wisconsin

MADISON—Sunday 10 a.m., Friends House, 202 Monroe St., 256-2249.

MILWAUKEE—Sunday 10 a.m.; meeting and First-day School, 7009 W. National Ave., BR 7-4247.

EXTRA COPIES OF FRIENDS JOURNAL (thirty cents apiece) will be sent upon request.

POSITIONS WANTED

YOUNG QUAKER TEACHERS OF HANDICAPPED CHILDREN, certified in elementary and special education, desires challenging position. Will send resume. Frances Howard, Linneil Camp (AFC), Linneil, California.

AVAILABLE

LAKE SHORE CABINS AND MOTEL, on Lake Superior Circle route. Elmer and Mary Alice Harvey, Lutsen, Minn.

RE-Upholster LARGE CHAIR FROM $69.50 Slipcover chair $84.90 Philadelphia and suburbs. SEREMBA—Ludlow 6-7592.

MEXICO CITY FRIENDS CENTER, Pleasant, reasonable accommodations, reservations, Casa de los Amigos, Ignacio Matusc McL, Mexico 1, D.F. Friends Meeting, Sundays at 11 a.m.

MISCELLANEOUS

BOOKPLATES—FREE CATALOG. Many attractive designs, special designing, too. Address Bookplates, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

ROSICRUCIAN TEACHINGS and QUAKER PRINCIPLES are MUTUALLY COMPLEMENTARY. Write, ROSICRUCIAN ORDER, AMORC, Rosicrucian Park, San Jose, California.
WANTED
HAVERFORD COLLEGE ADMINISTRATION
MEMBER AND WIFE require furnished house or apartment, preferably near campus, three months, August through October. Telephone Mrs. Carter, MI 9600.

QUAKER PROGRAM, New York metropolitan area, has opening part-time for couple or individual after September 1, 1965. Graduate study easily combined. Write Box K-344, Friends Journal.

HOST AND/OR HOSTESS wanted for Friends meeting house, also custodial person or couple. Free apt. in exchange for duties. Please reply to Melvin Boyce, 2646 McAllister, San Francisco, California.

Advertisements in the JOURNAL are inexpensive and productive

FYFE & BOYD FUNERAL HOME
* James E. Fyfe • Irwin B. Boyd
Cremation Service Available
7047 Germantown Ave.
Cheesman Hill 7-7700
* Member Germantown Meeting

Advertising Rates
DISPLAY — 1 page—$100; 2 columns—$148.40; half page (horizontal)—$52.55; 1 column—$35.65; 1-column width—8”—$33.15; 7”—$29.60; 6”—$25.75; 5”—$22.00; 4”—$17.90; 3”—$13.70; 2”—$9.30; 1”—$4.75. Discounts for six or more insertions.
CLASSIFIED—75¢ a word. Discounts for six or more insertions. Minimum: 12 words. (A Journal box number counts as three words.)
MEETING NOTICES—2¢ per line. No discounts.
DEADLINE—15 days before date of issue.

BUSINESS AND PROPERTY MANAGER
New York (City) Monthly Meeting seeks a mature man experienced in property maintenance and management, business and financial affairs, and personnel supervision. This is a new full-time job requiring a sensitive understanding of Friends' organization and business practice. Meeting property includes three meeting houses and two schools. Business and financial work includes affairs of both the Meeting and the schools. Salary is open.

Letters of application or recommendation with a brief summary of experience and salary requirements should be sent to

DIKAN P. DONCHIAN, 148 EAST 89th STREET, NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10028

A Complete, Modern Printing Plant
THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER
10 SOUTH 37th STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19104
Telephone EVergreen 6-1535

Clip below to subscribe, to renew, or to join Friends Journal Associates

FRIENDS JOURNAL
152-A NORTH FIFTEENTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19102

☐ Send me a year's subscription at $5 (Foreign rate $6).
☐ Enroll me as a Friends Journal Associate, helping to meet publication costs not covered by the subscription price. Associates make tax-deductible contributions of any amount (but not less than $5) above the subscription price.

☐ $____________ (check or money order) enclosed. ☐ Bill me.

NAME______________________________

ADDRESS______________________________

CITY________________________STATE______CODE________

ASK OUR OPINION OF YOUR SECURITIES

BIOREN & CO.
Members of New York Stock Exchange
Philadelphia-Baltimore Stock Exchange
American Stock Exchange

1424 Walnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa. 19102
PE 5-9400

CHARLES J. ERICKSON
Registered Representative

RESPONSIBLE QUAKER CAPITAL
Sought for young but experienced Pennsylvania Tool Company with sound product. Desires expanding line. Quaker-owned and controlled.
Contact Company Consultant: RAYMOND
PAAVO ARVIO, Rt. 45, Pomona, N. Y.

WANT

"A treatise on the questions of the day"
The Spiritual Answer
by Julius Rose; Brochure $1
FELLOWSHIP OF CHRISTIAN MEN
5406 Myrtle Ave., Ridgewood, N. Y. 11227

Elwood Convalescent Home
Baltimore Pike & Lincoln Avenue
Swarthmore, Pa.
Telephone Kingswood 3-0272

Private and semiprivate rooms
Quiet 10-acre estate
24-hour understanding nursing care

Under personal supervision of
MRS. ELLEN M. WOOD

A MUST for every Christian!
"A treatise on the questions of the day"
The Spiritual Answer
by Julius Rose; Brochure $1
FELLOWSHIP OF CHRISTIAN MEN
5406 Myrtle Ave., Ridgewood, N. Y. 11227
NO TRAFFIC ... NO PARKING ... WHEN YOU SAVE BY MAIL

374
FRIDIES JOURNAL
NO TRAFFIC • • • NO PARKING • • •
WHEN YOU SAVE — BY MAIL

Canonbury
The Country Center
Arlo & Polla Tatum, Directors
Canonbury, on six and a half acres of wooded countryside, offers comfortable accommodation and a relaxed atmosphere for your family vacation.
Swimming pool; play area; small library; family-style cooking.
Beginning the fall of 1965 we invite conferences for weekends or longer periods. For further information, write or phone:
BARBARA HINCHCLIFFE
Canonbury, Norma, N. J. 08347
Area code 609-691-7255

Belvedere
Convalescent Home
2507 Chestnut St., Chester, Pa.
TR 2-5373
Visit our most recently completed wing . . .
private and semiprivate rooms with baths;
large solarium overlooking six-acre estate on the edge of Swarthmore. . . .
Men, women, and couples . . . 24-hour nursing care under the personal supervision of
MRS. SADIE P. TURNER

PENDLE HILL
A unique opportunity is offered to Friends and others of all ages during the academic year 1965-66 to follow a course of individual creativity and study within the framework of the Pendle Hill community. Serving as teachers and counselors next year will be: DAN WILSON, HOWARD H. BRINTON, HENRY J. CADBURY, ELFRIDA VIPONT FOULDS, SCOTT CROM, MARY MORRISON, ROY McCORKEL, JACK SHEPHERD, and others.

For more details write:
Lloyd W. Lewis, Pendle Hill, Wallingford, Pa. 19086

Business Founded 1842
Woodcock, Moyer, Fricke & French
INCORPORATED
Members New York Stock Exchange
1500 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa., 19102
10-9700
DAVID KEIM TRUMPER
Registered Representative

Voice of Liberal Religion
The Register-Leader, official monthly magazine of the Unitarian Universalist Association, offers a wide variety of thoughtful, stimulating articles on current issues important to religious liberals, plus news of Unitarian Universalist activity around the country. For a free sample copy, write The Register-Leader, Box F, 25 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. 02108.

Horizon’s Edge
Country-Home School
A family school for boys and girls, grades 1-8. Young children need wholesome family life. Horizon’s Edge, a home-centered school, helps each child find and become himself, develop basic values and responsibility. Sound academic foundation moves at individual’s speed.
HORIZON’S EDGE SCHOOL
WILLIAM AND MILDRED MEES CANTERBURY, N. H.

Since 1697 “a patient quest for understanding”
ABINGTON FRIENDS SCHOOL
Jenkintown, Pennsylvania
—a college preparatory day school for girls from nursery through high school
NOW OFFERING COEDUCATION THROUGH THIRD GRADE WITH PLANS FOR ITS CONTINUATION THROUGHOUT THE SCHOOL
HOWARD W. BARTRAM, Headmaster
Turner 6-4350
SANDY SPRING FRIENDS SCHOOL
SANDY SPRING, MARYLAND

A Coeducational Boarding School
10th - 11th - 12th grades, under care of Baltimore Yearly Meetings
For students seeking a college-preparatory curriculum as well as for those interested in a terminal academic program. Twenty-five miles from Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, Md.

"Let your lives speak"
JOHN H. BURROWES . . . Headmaster

READERS TELL US THAT THEY READ THE JOURNAL "FROM BACK TO FRONT," WHICH MUST MEAN THAT THEY LOOK AT THE ADS FIRST.

FRIENDS' SELECT SCHOOL
THE PARKWAY AT SEVENTEENTH ST.
PHILADELPHIA 3, PENNSYLVANIA
Established 1845
Collegiate Day School
Kindergarten through Twelfth Grade

While college preparation is a primary aim, personal guidance helps each student to develop as an individual. Spiritual values and Quaker principles are emphasized. Central location provides many educational resources and easy access from the suburbs. Friends interested in a sound academic program are encouraged to apply.

G. Laurence Blauvelt, Headmaster

FRIENDS ACADEMY
ESTABLISHED 1877
This coeducational day school within 25 miles of New York provides a well-balanced college preparatory program designed to stress in the student a desire to live a creative Christian life in today's world.

Kindergarten through Grade 12

A reduction in tuition is available to members of The Society of Friends.

ALEXANDER TUNSTALL MACNUTT
Headmaster
Box B, Locust Valley, Long Island, N. Y.

FRIENDS CENTRAL SCHOOL
OVERBROOK, PHILADELPHIA, PA. 19151

A Coeducational Country Day School
Four-year kindergarten through 12th Grade
College Preparatory Curriculum

Founded in 1845 by the Society of Friends, our school continues to emphasize integrity, freedom, simplicity in education through concern for the individual student.

MERRILL E. BUSH, Headmaster

WHITNEY LAKE
A FINE FAMILY RESORT COLONY
Three beautiful mountain lakes situated in 600 acres of woodland on route 550. Bear Lake Wallenpaupack, Hawley, Pa. Moderately priced cottages and sites are available along the lake shore.

For information write or call
W. B. MACKY, 441 KIRK LANE, MEDIA, PA. 6-3387

FRIENDS BOOK STORE
302 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA 6, PA.
Märker 7-3376

Quaker books, British and American biographies, new books, large selection of children's books. ANY BOOK IN PRINT WILL BE ORDERED.

Mail and telephone orders filled promptly

In Philadelphia the FRIENDS JOURNAL is on sale at the John Wanamaker store and at the Friends Book Store, 302 Arch Street.

JOHN WOOLMAN SCHOOL
A Friends Secondary Boarding School
under the care of the College Park Friends Educational Association

Located on 170 acres in the foothills of California's Mother Lode, John Woolman School offers sound college preparation, simple rural living, work, contemplation, and social action. For further information write:

HAROLD BLICKENSTAFF, Principal
John Woolman School Rt. 1, Box J-26, Nevada City, Calif.

OAKWOOD SCHOOL
Poughkeepsie, New York

A QUAKER COEDUCATIONAL BOARDING SCHOOL

Grades 9 through 12 College Preparatory

THOMAS E. PURDY, Headmaster

"We believe that each individual, as he attempts to follow the example of Christ and put his beliefs into action, should live and work to express the best of himself and encourage the best in others, and try to promote the welfare of social units both within and beyond the school."

From the Oakwood Philosophy 1964

OAKWOOD has an enrollment of 205, almost equally divided among boys and girls. There are 155 boarding students. Here, after first meeting his academic obligations, each student can find additional opportunities for further development, physically, socially, intellectually, and spiritually, through an enlarged sports program, an expanding social service works program, the student foreign exchange program, annual spring conference with emphasis on some foreign country, international weekend, senior work project and other related activities.

For further information write to
KENNETH VOGT, Director of Admissions
OAKWOOD SCHOOL, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. 12601
BUYING A HOUSE ON LONG ISLAND, N.Y.?

Many Quality Listings (See our Photo Files)

WILBUR L. LEW
Licensed Real Estate Broker
516 IV 3-1123 1002 Grand Ave., N.Y. Baldwin, N.Y.

FOR A TEACHER

Enroll Now

FOR a desirable opening in a Friends school in the U. S. A. or FOR placement in a college or university, or in a good secondary, elementary, or primary school in the Southeast.

Free Enrollment for Friends
BYRON HAWORTH, Manager
Haworth Teachers Agency
High Point, North Carolina
Phone 883-6224

TRAIL’S END

KEENE VALLEY, NEW YORK

A SMALL FAMILY INN AND HIKERS’ LODGE IN THE HEART OF THE ADIRONDACKS

High Mountains – Unspoiled Woods – Trout Streams

or a Resting Chair by the Fire

Activities for Children

1965 Season: June 25 to September 7

Send for folder to MRS. ELIZABETH G. LEHMANN
KEENE VALLEY, N.Y. 12943
Member Westtown Meeting

INVEST IN GROWING MEETINGS

You can invest in the building of meeting houses by purchasing mortgage pool notes of FRIENDS MEETING HOUSE FUND, INC. Interest: 6% payable semiannually. For prospectus and specimen note, write:

FRIENDS GENERAL CONFERENCE
1520 Race Street
Philadelphia, Pa. 19102

1896

1965

BACK LOG CAMP
SABAEL, NEW YORK

On Inclson Lake in the Adirondack Mountains

A family camp for families and adults.

July 2 to Sept. 4. $70 weekly for adults; reductions for children and families. Brochure.

Address camp direct or Telephone 518, Indian Lake 2497

FURNITURE RE-UPHOLSTERY AND SLIP COVERS

THOM SEREMBA
near Philadelphia. Please see our advertisement in classified column under “Available.”

JOURNAL ADVERTISER SINCE 1955

Counseling Service of the Family Relations Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting

For appointments call counselors:
Karoline Solnit, M.S.S., Bryn Mawr, Pa., call LA 3-2172 between 9 and 10 a.m. Christopher Nicholson, M.S.W., Philadelphia 44, Pa., call DA 7-721 between 9 and 10 a.m.

Anita Rigler, L. Ostekamp, A.C.S.W., Philadelphia 44, Pa., call GE 8-2329 between 9 and 10 p.m.

The loss of a partner can close a business for good!

As your lawyer will tell you, the death of one of your partners spells the legal death of your partnership unless you have an express agreement to the contrary. The effect on your business can be serious, perhaps fatal.

A business continuation agreement, funded by Business Insurance from New York Life, can guarantee surviving partners complete ownership of a firm. It also assures the heirs of the deceased partner a fair price, in cash, for their interest in the business.

For the finest insurance plans for your business, see

THOMAS T. TAYLOR, JR.

New York Life
Insurance Company
Three Penn Center Plaza
Philadelphia, Pa. 19102

LOCust 8-0600

IT’S SO EASY TO OPEN AN INSURED SAVINGS ACCOUNT BY MAIL

Send a check and your name and address; your account will be insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation up to $10,000. Legal investment for Trust Funds.

LANGHORNE FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

126 S. Bellevue Avenue, Langhorne, Pennsylvania

A. PAUL TOWNSEND, Jr., Secretary

SK yline 7-5138

CRETH & SULLIVAN, INC.

Insurance

320 WALNUT STREET
PHILADELPHIA 6, PA.

WAlnut 2-7900

LET US SOLVE YOUR INSURANCE PROBLEMS

THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER

Three Penn Center Plaza
Philadelphia, Pa. 19102

LOCust 8-0600